

PROJECT FACT SHEET
(24 February 2004)

PROJECT: Mackinac Isle, Harbor Breakwater, Michigan

DESCRIPTION: The project is located on the south shore of Mackinac Island, Michigan. The project involves construction of a third breakwater, between the existing east and west breakwaters, to protect the inner harbor from strong storms from the southeast. This construction will stabilize the harbor access during heavy southeast storm surge. The City of Mackinac Island is dependant on water transportation and accessible from the mainland of northern Michigan only across the often rough waters of Lake Huron. This additional breakwater will improve commercial access to the harbor during heavy southeast storm surge.
